As you know, the Governor has implemented additional mitigations to Region 4 which impacts the Metro East small businesses and especially our restaurants and bars.

The City of OFallon, the Village of Shiloh and the Chamber of Commerce are advocating on behalf of small businesses. Read the letter to the Governor (on the next pages) and the IL Dept. of Public Health that we sent out last week.

You can help - sign the Petition created by John Van Cleave, HMA Hotels below, to keep local businesses open. Support local - eat at your local restaurants, visit and buy from local shops and salons. Tip your servers. Be kind. Wear a mask. Be patient and don't complain about having to comply with restrictions our businesses HAVE to implement.

Update Regarding COVID-19 Mitigations as of 09/01/20

RESTORE ILLINOIS

Resurgence Mitigations for Region 4 ANNOUNCED 9/1/20 | EFFECTIVE 9/2/20

Region 4 has exceeded IDPH criteria that trigger additional mitigations to combat a resurgence of COVID-19 and prevent uncontrollable spread. As detailed in the July 15 Restore Illinois resurgence plan, new mitigations will be applied if a region's positivity rate averages greater than or equal to 8 percent for three consecutive days, as it did in Region 4 from August 14 to 16, 2020. Since the positivity rate in Region 4 has averaged greater than or equal to 8 percent for 14 days since initial mitigation measures were implemented on August 18, additional mitigations are required. Region 4 includes Bond, Clinton, Madison, Monroe, Randolph, St. Clair and Washington counties.

Effective September 2, Region 4 will operate under these new mitigation requirements:

SETTING	MITIGATION REQUIREMENTS
Bars	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> All bars close at 11:00pm No indoor service All bar patrons should be seated at tables outside No ordering, seating, or congregating at bar (bar stools should be removed) Tables should be 6 feet apart No standing or congregating indoors or outdoors while waiting for a table or exiting No dancing or standing indoors Reservations required for each party No seating of multiple parties at one table
Restaurants	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> All restaurants close at 11:00pm No indoor dining or bar service Tables should be 6 feet apart No standing or congregating indoors or outdoors while waiting for a table or exiting Reservations required for each party No seating of multiple parties at one table
Meetings, social events and gatherings (including weddings, funerals, potlucks, etc.)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Limit to lesser of 25 guests or 25% of overall room capacity both indoors and outdoors No party buses Gaming and Casinos close at 11:00pm, are limited to 25 percent capacity, and follow mitigations for bars and restaurants, if applicable
Organized group recreational activities (fitness centers, sports, etc.)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> No change All Sports Guidance effective August 15, 2020, remains in effect Outdoor Activities (not included in the above exposure settings) continue per current DCEO guidance

IDPH will continue to track the positivity rate in Region 4 over a 14-day monitoring period to determine if mitigations can be relaxed, if additional mitigations are required, or if current mitigation should remain in place. If the positivity rate averages less than or equal to 6.5 percent over a 14-day period, the region will return to Phase 4 mitigations under the Restore Illinois Plan. If the positivity rate averages between 6.5 percent and 8 percent, IDPH will continue to monitor the region to determine if additional mitigations are needed. If the positivity rate averages greater than or equal to 8 percent after 14 days, more stringent mitigations will be applied to further reduce spread of the virus.

Support our local restaurants and bars!

The National Restaurant Association's Restaurant Law Center has provided guidance on what restaurant operators can do to handle potentially unpleasant encounters when customers refuse to follow the restaurant's mask policy. The Q&A covers how operators might handle customers who cite their constitutional rights, claim a disability, or just forgot their masks.

Tips include posting precise signage, takeout and curbside service options, and having extra masks on hand.

Guidance for Restaurants: Guests' Face Covering Use*

August 20, 2020

1. Are guests required to wear face masks when coming into a restaurant?

A: Many jurisdictions require individuals to wear face coverings in public spaces, including restaurants, because of the COVID-19 pandemic. The Association has a comprehensive list of "Facial Covering & Health Screening Requirements." For questions regarding whether employers may require employees to wear face coverings while working, please see the Restaurant Law Center's guidance on employee mask use and temperature checks."

2. What if a guest refuses to wear a mask on Constitutional grounds?

A: Guests and employees have no constitutional free speech rights in a private business or workplace. The First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution protects an individual's right to free speech from infringement by the U.S. Government — not a private business. Similarly, state constitutions do not create such rights. Thus, a restaurant can legally deny service to individuals that refuse to wear a mask for alleged Constitutional reasons.

3. What if a guest refuses to comply because of a disability?

A: Title III of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) requires restaurants to provide equal enjoyment of goods and services to individuals with disabilities. If a guest has a medical or disability-related condition that may require an accommodation, then the restaurant must consider the reasonable accommodation it can offer the guest. A guest must advise the business he/she needs an accommodation if the need for one is not obvious. A restaurant should not request medical documentation when a guest requests a public accommodation.

However, a restaurant need not accommodate a guest if doing so would impede the business's ability to safely provide its goods and services. Under current Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) guidance, allowing unmasked members of the public into business establishments creates a health and safety risk. Moreover, COVID-19 is spread by persons who may be asymptomatic, and who possibly have no idea whether they carry the virus. As a result, guests are required to wear masks or other suitable face coverings (e.g., bandana, face shield, and the like) under state and local ordinances mandating masks.

Under these circumstances, businesses have a good faith basis to not accommodate an unmasked member of the public. Although, no-contact shopping alternatives should be considered and communicated to the guest where a disability is involved, such as allowing for a curbside order.

* This material is provided for informational purposes only. It is not intended to constitute legal advice nor does it create a client-lawyer relationship between the Restaurant Law Center and any recipient. Recipients should consult with counsel before taking any actions based on the information contained within this material.

4. What if I am concerned about a violent confrontation?

A: Reports abound of restaurant workers confronted with increasing violence when asking patrons to wear a mask. Under the Occupational Health and Safety Act, employers have a duty to provide a safe workplace for employees. Businesses should consider the impact threatening guest encounters on their premises could have on the safety of their employees and guests, as well as business operations. Some practical steps businesses can take include the following:

- Make signage abundant and clear. The CDC recommends using verbal announcements, signs, and visual cues to promote social distancing and safety initiatives even before guests enter the building. Many businesses use humor to communicate the necessary message (the internet provides many examples). Another approach is to focus on employee safety and the mandate on the company to provide a safe work environment (i.e., "We want our associates to remain healthy and available to provide you the guest service you deserve, so please wear your mask.").
- Provide no-contact service delivery where possible. Restaurants should consider providing no-contact service alternatives and including the phone number for curbside pickup or delivery options on mask signage for guests not wishing to comply with the public health requirements.
- When possible, give masks away for free. When a guest attempts to enter a business without a mask on, the business can offer one. This may defuse the situation if the person simply forgot their mask and feels frustrated that he/she needs to return home or their car to retrieve a mask before entering.
- Train employees on mask policies and procedures. Employees should not argue with guests who refuse to wear a mask and potentially escalate the situation. Employees should not attempt to apprehend resistant guests, block guests from entering or exiting the store, or physically force guests to leave. Employees should remain calm, discreetly call security or local law enforcement and allow the police to handle it.
- Assign the right person(s) to communicate the message. Staff have different skill sets; some are charming and disarming, while others are whizzes with numbers but have a gruff demeanor. The more pleasant the approach with non-compliant guests, the more likely of gaining compliance. Instead of being demanding with a guest who refuses to wear a mask, try a softer approach (e.g., "Wow, you must be having a tough day today. This whole COVID-19 situation has been hard on all of us. How can I convince you we all just want to get through the day healthy and ready for tomorrow?"). It may not always work, but this is about minimizing the issues when possible.

Dear Governor Pritzker and Dr. Ezike,

As one of the largest Chambers of Commerce in southwestern Illinois representing nearly 600 members, we feel it is imperative to express our concerns about the ability for all businesses, but particularly small businesses and restaurants, in continuing to withstand the restrictions placed upon them.

- Throughout the course of this pandemic, the food and beverage industry has been and continues to be forced to bear the brunt of the COVID response plan.
 - Restaurants and bars have experienced loss of inventory and staff. This industry has been hit the hardest during COVID and many won't recover.
 - Our 115+ bars and restaurants employ approximately 2,750 employees whose salaries and benefits will not be infused back into the economy as a result of closed business. This is a lost revenue for the community of over $1M. This doesn't include the millions of dollars in investments small business owners have made in the community to open these establishments.
 - New restrictions make it nearly impossible for local fraternal organizations who provide necessary help to those in the community to function. Many residents and veterans need support from these groups to survive.
 - Small locally owned restaurants and bars are severely limited, yet the fact that casinos can remain open is simply incomprehensible. Another shut down or restriction to the food and beverage industry will be unsustainable. Many will be forced to close causing a devastating economic ripple effect.
- We urge you to consider developing a separate set of criteria for business based on the size of their operations. For example, a locally owned pharmacy shouldn't have the same rules imposed upon it as a national pharmacy chain. We believe a unique set of guidelines could be created to allow small businesses to operate safely and equitably.

- Much of the relief funding didn't get to the small businesses in our area who needed it the most. Because we reside and operate businesses in the zip code of 62269, we were not eligible for some of the funding while communities surrounding our zip code qualified for support. We urge you to expand the next round of Business Interruption Grants to help ALL small businesses survive.
- Nursing homes and congregate care centers need to be separated from the area positivity rates as they are locked down for the most part and are not moving within the population of our region.
- O'Fallon-Shiloh historically has had a lower COVID-19 positivity percentage than our overall region. We believe our businesses have followed the rules throughout the pandemic by practicing hand washing, wearing of face masks, and social distancing. We respectfully ask you to re-examine how the region is divided and look at opportunities not to punish communities who are meeting the thresholds.

We are advocating on behalf of the small businesses we represent. They are suffering. Small business is the heart of America. Please lessen the restrictions on them. Without small business, our local economy may never recover.

ELITE SERVICES OFFERS DISINFECTING TREATMENTS FOR YOUR LOCATION

EDWARDSVILLE, IL - With many businesses, churches, and organizations opening back up soon, the need to have those locations disinfected is continuing to rise. Elite Services is a solution to properly fill those needs.

Elite Services is a locally owned business that is equipped with cutting edge equipment, EPA-Registered, disinfectants and a treatment process that can eliminate and stop the spread of viruses, harmful bacteria, and diseases. Elite Services helps create an environment that keeps employees and customers safe. Their disinfectants are food safe and electronics friendly to ensure safety in all aspects in the workplace.

Elite Services disinfects offices, fleet vehicles, restaurants, churches, gyms, warehouses, and much more. They offer one-time treatments, ongoing preventative maintenance, and emergency services for sanitizing and disinfecting. Antiviral sprays, ULV fogging, antibacterial and antiviral solution sprays are a great way to help sanitize and disinfect a business.

"By using EPA-Registered disinfectants, we safely disinfect and sanitize your business," Tim Jenkins, Elite Services co-owner said. "We provide you with a solution that fits your needs." Jenkins said the business is something separate from the Elite Event Services portion of the operation and was conceived during the COVID-19 Pandemic because there is such a need. "With this growing concern, many organizations, businesses, and churches are seeing the need for this service to add an extra layer of comfort and safety to their employees and customers," he said.

"Antibacterial fogging is an effective method for disinfecting the air as well as surfaces. It can kill viruses in hard to reach areas that traditional cleaning will not remove. A traditional wipe down only penetrates approx. 30 percent of a surface area, but the fogging process provides 100 percent coverage." "For large outdoor areas or industrial buildings, our commercial foggers and sprayers work very effectively. With the ability to reach over 20 feet, our cleaners can sanitize areas that are difficult to reach with traditional methods."

O'Fallon Public Safety Department implements Special Needs Information Program for persons with special needs who have been separated from their families, schools, or caretakers

The O'Fallon Public Safety Department has created a new community partnership called the Special Needs Information Program to help reunite members of the community with special needs who have been separated from their families, schools, or caretakers. Members of the community can sign up for the program by completing the information at <https://www.ofallon.org/police-department/webforms/special-needs-information-program>.

"Often children and adults with autism spectrum disorder (ASD), Alzheimer's disease, or other medical conditions that involve memory loss or confusion may wander away from their home, school, or other caretakers' residence and get lost. When someone is lost, time is the biggest factor to ensure someone returns home safely and quickly, especially during extreme temperatures or dangerous weather. Providing accurate information to First Responders is critical and transmitting this information to the public is important. This program will assist First Responders in having advanced information on their mobile data terminals in their vehicles to locate individuals to reunite with their families," said Mayor Herb Roach.

Important information for First Responders includes current photographs, physical descriptions, contact information for the individual, and medical information that will help with safety and behavioral concerns regarding the individual. This includes what they are attracted to, where they have been located before, and if they currently use any kind of tracking device. Suggestions for interacting with the individual and tips on what to do when they are located are also very important. This includes communication differences, verbal/non-verbal and sensory facts. Once all the information is collected the individual's information will remain confidential and will be secured in the O'Fallon Police Department's database so it can be provided to First Responders when necessary. These are critical facts needed to locate individuals who wander away or assist in identifying individuals who are located who have not yet been reported.

You can self-enroll, or have a parent, or loved one complete the enrollment form. A signed waiver must also be completed before you can be enrolled. All of this can be done digitally on the O'Fallon Police Department Website. The O'Fallon Police Department will periodically ask for updates to ensure all information is accurate. This program is open to all O'Fallon residents, caretakers of individuals with special needs, and anyone with special needs who attends school or works in O'Fallon.

There is no cost associated with registration and you may delete your registration at any time by contacting Detective Adam Krack at akrack@ofallon.org.

Why Malcolm Gladwell's 'Broken Windows' Theory Is Key For Building A Better Business

Article Adapted by Phil Lewis, Forbes.com Contributor.

<https://www.forbes.com/sites/phillewis1/2019/10/08/small-issues--big-problems/#63c712422650>

In The Tipping Point, Malcolm Gladwell details the “broken windows” theory originally introduced in the 1980's by social scientists James Q. Wilson and George L. Kelling. It posits that visible signs of crime, anti-social behavior and civil disorder create an urban environment that encourages further crime. The best way to reduce crime, then, is to deal with the visible signs first—however insignificant they might appear to be. Studies undertaken in New York and the Netherlands support the effectiveness of this approach. As the journal Science reported, “One example of disorder, like graffiti or littering, can indeed encourage another, like stealing”.

The Broken Windows Theory is directed at the norm-setting of urban disorder, crime and anti-social behavior breeding the same etc. where; if an urban areas is left in a state of disrepair, broken windows, rubbish on the streets and overgrown gardens, people will follow suit and adopt the same attitude to their environment. They are living the NORM.

"Consider a building with a few broken windows. If the windows are not repaired, the tendency is for vandals to break a few more windows. Eventually, they may even break into the building, and if it's unoccupied, perhaps become squatters or light fires inside." - James Q. Wilson and George L. Kelling

Could this also hold true for businesses? Consider a business with a few under performing people. If the people are not supported and not understanding the strategy, the tendency is for others to start to under perform also.

If an organization, say, fails to run its meetings on time, does this foster an environment in which lax governance becomes the norm? Would a high average number of people in said meetings normalize a culture in which decision-making is slow or stagnant? On a more positive note, might improving, say, the warmth of welcome given by a receptionist to a visitor boost overall levels of organizational happiness?

Finding your focus

It is worth stepping back to examine why this is an important question. Harvard Business Review asserts that in the 21st century, growth is driven by focusing on the factors that drive top line revenue growth. In turn, this mandates the need for organizations to be resilient, responsive and innovative. In simple terms, the pace at which new ideas can be surfaced, tested and embedded is a key predictor of success. Pick any business you admire and you will find this ability in spades.

In a world where what gets measured gets done, you will also find that these successful businesses measure their performance. But many organizations are far too busy looking through the rear view mirror. According to Martin Lucas, a behavioral mathematician who works with businesses to improve their productivity, most businesses are stuck in a 20th century paradigm. “Companies tend to be great at measuring their financial performance, but this is only ever a lagging indicator of performance. They aren’t measuring their pace of learning. They aren’t measuring their average time to get new ideas to market. In fact, they don’t measure anything predictive at all.” This lack of meaningful measurement poses a serious risk to organizational health.

Added to that, what limited data does exist about resilience, responsiveness and innovation potential tends to be ill-defined and unreliable. According to Lucas, “Employee engagement is a classic example of what I call meaningless measurement. Few organizations have defined what ‘engagement’ means and why it matters to them. Fewer still understand the causal links between it and the performance that they are getting.” Pulse surveys suffer a similar problem, Lucas believes.

Tackle the small issues and the big problems will follow

The broken windows theory suggests an innovative way of solving the measurement dilemma. If the small problems in a business do predict the big ones, then the task becomes to identify where the most important correlations might exist, and start testing the impact of micro-interventions on organizational performance.

Here’s how you might do this, in practice:

Look across your organization. Identify a major problem that you need to solve. Ensure that it relates to resilience, responsiveness and innovation (not financial performance, which is a net result of these characteristics).

Write down as many hypotheses as you can in terms of “small” ways that this problem presents in your organization. For example, if a lack of agility is your issue, you might want to consider the number of people in your meetings, the time periods you default to in your planning processes or the frequency of your Board meetings.

Identify, against each hypothesis, a micro-intervention—a simple change that you can run over a few weeks.

Do this, measuring the before and after impact—ideally in collaboration with a data scientist or business intelligence unit.

This might sound complicated, but the reality is that most businesses do this every day—namely, find something they want to change and change it. Not only will it help you improve but, just showing you place importance on these indicators, triggers a lift in impetus, buzz and ideas amongst your team. The secret is to do this in a way that creates a learning organization. Start by identifying your broken windows—and see what they have to teach you.

Mental Health Tips for Staying Sane During COVID

School is back in session, college campuses are full-ish, and we're adjusting to our new routine of face masks, plexiglass glass, and hand sanitizer. Living with limited social interaction and in high-stress conditions will likely impact everyone's mental health to some degree. Our mind is a powerhouse and is the foundation of our existence. It is what determines how we think, feel, and act. Our mental health is the MVP in our mood, behavior, life choices, and relationships, etc. Fortunately, you have control of your mental health!

This year has provided us with ample opportunity to learn the value, mostly the hard way, of good self-care. As we continue to social distance, self-care is necessary to maintain the health of our minds.

Mental Health Tips During COVID

Routine

We are creatures of habit, yet we struggle with sticking to our routines. We may "want" to sleep in until noon or not take a shower until 5:00 pm, but we "need" to get up at the same time every day, make the bed and take a shower. Lack of a routine impacts our mental health slowly and subtly.

Choose a routine that works for you, and that's attainable. For example, if you've never been a morning person, setting a goal to wake up at 6:00 am, workout for 30 minutes, and make a protein shake may be challenging to achieve and maintain from the start.

Self-Awareness

Notice uncomfortable thoughts and feelings. Instead of using distraction to avoid numbing your feelings, acknowledge the discomfort, and notice where you feel it in your body without judgment. Let them go when you're ready.

Please pay attention to your stress and what you do with it. You can be productive or destructive. May the odds ever be in your favor!

Mindfulness

Mindfulness is living in the present moment. It's not thinking about a project you did at work earlier in the day or what you will make for dinner when you get home. It's what's going on in the here and now.

The more we live in the present, the more we savor life's experiences such as the sights, sounds, smells, and yes, tastes. Mindfulness-based apps have been scientifically proven to reduce stress.

Gratitude/Positivity

Practicing gratitude is a lot harder than it sounds, especially during a pandemic! "You find what you're looking for." If you're looking for negativity, you will find it. On the other hand, if you're looking for the "feel-good feelings," you will find them. Reflecting on a phone call with a friend or soaking in a deep belly laugh are things to notice. Without have a presence, self-awareness, and gratitude practice, these small yet fruitful moments would have been missed.

Awareness, mindfulness, and gratuity can go a long way, even in a pandemic! Your mental wellness matters! If you're struggling and need support or have questions, reach out to myself or another therapist in our community. O'Fallon/Shiloh has a great community of therapists there for you!

September is Pain Awareness Month

According to John Hopkins Medicine, “Nearly 100 million Americans experience chronic pain —more than those who have diabetes, heart disease and cancer combined.” Pain is a warning sign from your body that something is wrong. Specifically at the end-of-life, it’s often related to the natural disease progression and the body becoming weaker. There are many ways to manage pain at the end-of-life. Regardless of age or diagnosis, if pain affects someone’s life, finding solutions for comfort are a priority. We recommend seeking a physician’s recommendation quality of life measures. Some solutions worth asking about include massage, wound care, medication management, and deprescribing, which means removing medications to reduce interactions of medications.

SPREADING KINDNESS

Your Health and Wellness Committee purchased these “Spreading Kindness” postcards as an outreach project for 2020. We haven’t had any events since March to hand these out. We still want to use the postcards, but maybe add to our outreach.

We have many seniors who have been homebound during COVID and haven’t had a lot of interaction. We’d love it if our Chamber members wrote a postcard and dropped it in the box outside of Age Smart Community Resources (801 West State Street, O’Fallon). Age Smart will take care of addressing the post card to a specific senior and will mail them out. This will include our seniors who are in Senior Living facilities. Our Health and Wellness Committee feels like this is a demographic who would definitely benefit from getting a little mail.

You can pick up the post cards at the Chamber office (116 East First Street, O’Fallon). Give us a call ahead (632-3377) as our hours fluctuate right now.

You can also mail these cards to anyone else you feel could use a little kindness.

Free Disposable Masks for Businesses

St. Clair County has provided the City of O’Fallon with disposable blue surgical masks for local businesses. They come in packs of 50. If you’re a business who is in need of masks, please contact the Chamber (632-3377 or director@ofallonchamber.com) and we can make arrangements for you to pick up masks here at the Chamber office. No charge.

Masks can be picked up Monday – Thursday, 9 – 11 a.m. at 116 East First Street, O’Fallon. Please call before-hand to let us know you are coming and how many packs you would like.

A Webinar from CMIT Solutions of Metro East September 10th, 10:30 am CST

The impact of Ransomware is widespread:

- Costs SMBs $75 Billion a Year
- Hits every industry from Construction to Real Estate to Professional Services
- To get into your systems, they may send a phishing email to your staff. Because 94% of people can't distinguish between a real email and a phishing email 100% of the time, they get in. And if they don't, they try again until someone somewhere clicks the link.
